

KEY OBJECTIVES

Stimulate and support teachers in acquiring content knowledge and skills related to teaching European values.

Identify core European values and integrate them into a cross-curricular approach.

Provide teachers with opportunities to experience and teach European values in various settings.

Develop effective tools for teachers and educators to engage students with core values, such as theatre plays and exercises/games.

Create awareness among students and teachers of the importance of developing and exemplifying common European values.

Develop materials based on a box of values to teach European values through exercises and games.

EuropePlus

Europe Plus aims to promote the European Union values through school education by empowering teachers and pupils with the tools to make those values effective and practical.

Background

TEACHING COMMON VALUES IN EUROPE

According to the recommendations made by the Commission of Inquiry for CULT in 2017, each nation should try to find a good balance between policy direction and the granting of autonomy to schools. The leadership perspective expresses what society expects from all schools in relation to the teaching of common values.

Autonomy, on the other hand, offers schools the space to develop their own pedagogical vision of value development, within their own context, through the active participation of teachers and pupils.

Schools should be at the centre of their community and serve as a pedagogical engine for community development. Parents, community groups and NGOs should surround the school and collaborate in the education of young people.
